Wilson, Janet
Our rights : how kids are changing the world
Summary: This around-the-world tour introduces readers to children who have taken on the role of social activist, fighting for human rights and social justice in countries as diverse as Yemen and Congo, Canada and the United States. A diverse range of other issues is covered, including Aboriginal rights, human trafficking and child soldiers. The full United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child can be found alongside tips for how kids everywhere can make a difference.
Subjects: Human rights workers; Biography; Juvenile literature.

Arnot, Madeleine
Reproducing gender? : selected critical essays on educational theory and feminist politics
Summary: This book charts the development of a theory of gender relations built up over the last twenty years. It demonstrates the power of feminist educational theory and research, and its role in creating new political and academic agendas.
Subjects: Gender identity in education; Sex discrimination in education; Feminism and education.

305.42 H784
Hooks, Bell
Feminism is for everybody : passionate politics
Summary: The author introduces a popular theory of feminism rooted in common sense and the wisdom of experience. She applies her critical analysis to the most challenging issues facing feminists today, including reproductive rights, violence, race, class, and work. In language both eye-opening and optimistic, the author encourages us to demand alternatives to patriarchal, racist, and homophobic culture, and to imagine a different future.
Subjects: Feminist theory; Feminism; Political aspects; Sex discrimination against women.

305.569 F234
Farmer, Paul
Pathologies of power : health, human rights, and the new war on the poor
Summary: The author uses harrowing stories of life and death in extreme situations to interrogate our understanding of human rights. He challenges conventional thinking within human rights circles and exposes the relationships between political and economic injustice, on one hand, and the suffering and illness of the powerless, on the other.
Subjects: Poverty.

Bell, Lee Anne
Storytelling for social justice: connecting narrative and the arts in antiracist teaching
Summary: Bell describes the Storytelling Project Model, a conceptual and pedagogical method for using the arts to teach about racism in American society. The model analyzes racism through four story types: stock stories that reproduce racism and white advantage, concealed stories that serve as sources of critical literacy among communities of color and white racial progressives, resistance stories, and emerging/transforming stories that challenge racism in everyday life. She describes the racial functions of each type of story and discusses how they can be explored in public high school and teacher education settings.
Subjects: Racism; Social justice; Storytelling.

Race, space, and the law: unmapping a white settler society
Toronto, ON: Between the Lines, 2002.
Summary: This book belongs to a growing field of exploration that spans critical geography, sociology, law, education, and critical race and feminist studies. Writers who share this terrain reject the idea that spaces, and the arrangement of bodies in them, emerge naturally over time. Instead, they look at how spaces are created and the role of law in shaping and supporting them. They expose hierarchies that emerge from, and in turn produce, oppressive spatial categories.
Subjects: Race relations Canada; Spatial behavior Canada; Canada Colonization.

305.8 R121
Racing research, researching race: methodological dilemmas in critical race studies
Summary: The contributors to this volume explore how ideologies of race and racism intersect with nationality and gender to shape the research experience.
Subjects: Race Methodology; Sociology Research Methodology; Race awareness; Racism.

Readings for diversity and social justice
Summary: With full sections dedicated to racism, sexism, classism, heterosexism, and ableism, as well as transgenderism, ethno-religious oppression, and adult and ageism, this bestselling text goes beyond the range of traditional readers. Each thematic section is divided into three parts: Contexts, Personal Voices, and Next Steps and Actions. The first two parts provide vivid portraits of the meaning of diversity and the realities of oppression. The third part challenges the reader to take action to end oppressive behavior and affirm diversity and social justice.

Dismantling contemporary deficit thinking: educational thought and practice

Summary: Deficit thinking is a pseudoscience founded on racial and class bias. It "blames the victim" for school failure instead of examining how schools are structured to prevent poor students and students of color from learning. This book provides comprehensive critiques and anti-deficit thinking alternatives to this oppressive theory by framing the linkages between prevailing theoretical perspectives and contemporary practices within the complex historical development of deficit thinking.

Antonio’s story [DVD]
Summary: This video is a documentary of Antonio Joao's flight from Angola to South Africa at age 11, when his parents were killed. There he lived hand to mouth, finally stowing away on a freighter. He arrived in Vancouver on Sept. 2, 2001, only 9 days before the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks. Consequently his treatment as a refugee claimant under the Canadian Refugee system was different than it would be today. The study guide uses Antonio's experiences as reference points to investigate social injustice issues in Africa and Canada.

Spectacular things happen along the way: lessons from an urban classroom

Summary: A fresh take on what happens when a teacher says enough is enough and does the unthinkable: design a curriculum based on their students' actual needs and aspirations. Flying in the face of reason, Brian Schultz did just that when he challenged his 5th grade class in urban Chicago to name a problem in their community that they wanted to solve. As the students of Room 405 focus on replacing their dilapidated school building, a historic voyage of repair and healing begins. Ultimately, it is their own questions and incredible accomplishments that make them realize their commitment and ability to change the world around them.

Re-engaging disconnected youth: transformative learning through restorative and social justice education

Summary: As many young adults continue to disengage with learning each day, teachers and administrators struggle to find programming that re-engages secondary students with their schooling and communities. In a Midwestern alternative school, three teachers built a curriculum around hands-on learning, restorative justice talking circles, and multicultural education, in the hopes that it would re-engage and inspire youth. This book is an in-depth, qualitative study of the ways the program transformed adult and youth perceptions of trust, connections, schooling, and human rights.

Women and educational leadership
Summary: The authors reveal that women leaders are more collaborative by nature and demonstrate a commitment to social justice. They tend to bring an instructional focus to leadership, include spiritual dimensions in their work, and strive for balance between the personal and professional. This book offers a new model of leadership that shifts away from the traditional heroic notion of leadership to the collective account of leadership that focuses on leadership for a specific purpose like social justice. The authors include illustrative examples of leaders who have brought diverse groups to work toward common ground. They also show how leadership is a way to facilitate and support the work of organizational members.
Subjects: Women school administrators; Educational leadership.

Life at the intersection : community, class and schooling
Summary: The intersection of Jane and Finch in Toronto's north end has long been portrayed as one of Canada's most troubled neighbourhoods, with images of social dysfunction, shootings and at-risk youth dominating media accounts. Setting out to discover what it means and what it takes to grow up in this economically disadvantaged and racially and ethnically diverse neighbourhood, Life at the Intersection engages young people, parents and educators to explore the experiences, issues, perceptions and ambitions of the youth of this community. What Carl James finds is that young people have come to appreciate the social capital and cultural wealth of their neighbourhood and that they use the negative perceptions of their community as inspiration for educational and social success.

Race frameworks: a multidimensional theory of racism and education
Summary: This is a comprehensive introduction to the main frameworks for thinking about, conducting research on, and teaching about race and racism in education. The author surveys the dominant race theories and, more specifically, focuses on those frameworks that are considered essential to cultivating a critical attitude toward race and racism. The book examines four frameworks: Critical Race Theory (CRT), Marxism, Whiteness Studies, and Cultural Studies. A critique follows each framework in order to analyze its strengths and set its limits.

Decolonizing education: nourishing the learning spirit
Summary: The author documents the nature of Eurocentric models of education, and their devastating impacts on Indigenous knowledge. Chronicling the negative consequences of forced assimilation and the failure of current educational policies to bolster the social and economic conditions of Aboriginal populations, Battiste proposes a new model of education. She argues that the preservation of Aboriginal knowledge is an Aboriginal right, preserved by the many treaties with First Nations. Current educational policies must undergo substantive reform. Central to this process is the rejection of the racism inherent to colonial systems of education, and the repositioning of Indigenous humanities, sciences, and languages as vital fields of knowledge.

Privileged thinking in today’s schools : the implications for social justice
Summary: In this collection of scenarios and episodes, many of which were experienced by the authors in their years as school administrators, you will find an array of provocative examples of social injustice in the classroom, and what you can do to prevent it in your own school community. As the authors candidly and vulnerably reveal their own "blind spots" and biases that occurred "on their watch," readers will be able to take a look in the mirror as well, thus taking a critical step in better advocating for those students "left on the fringe" in classrooms and schools.
